The experience

Guests are accommodated in spacious suites which include all the modern facilities of a leading hotel combined with the character and opulence of colonial rail travel. Sleeping carriages are interspersed with wood-panelled lounge and club cars where you can relax as spectacular scenery fills the large viewing windows. When night falls, the train transforms into a fine dining restaurant. Guests dress for a dinner of perfectly prepared delicacies complemented with South Africa's finest wines. Each meal is served to a selection of tasteful background music, ranging from smooth jazz and light classical, to the Soweto String Quartet.

Luxury suites

The luxury suites extend your personal domain by more than a metre and the twin or double-bed suites offer deep long baths for slow, luxuriant soaking. The suites extend the choice of radio and movie channels even further by including a private digital entertainment centre and an inviting selection of music CDs and big-screen movies on DVD.

Lounge and club cars

Linking the private suites of the Blue Train are two wood-panelled cars - the lounge and club cars. The elegant lounges are ideally positioned for an aperitif, an interlude between meals or an after-dinner conversation over coffee or Cognac. Smoking is allowed in the burnished surroundings of the club car where mellow lamplight sets the tone for quiet reflection or the glow of good company. Travellers can while away the journey with a game of cards, chess or backgammon, tune in to the big-screen television or browse through a volume from the library while savouring a beverage of choice from the well-stocked bar. Unwind, relax, and indulge.

Dining car

The Blue Train experience is a banquet for all the senses and this is especially true of our dining car. Here the reassuring weight of Sheffield cutlery and crystal glassware on crisp white linen set the tone for the delights to follow. A meal on the Blue Train is an experience in itself. Our menus feature a selection of local cuisine from Karoo lamb and ostrich fillet, to Knysna oysters accompanied by award-winning cultivars from the Cape wine lands, all serving as the perfect complement to the landscape through which you are travelling.
